REPEATS STORY TO COMMITTEE

Senator Penrose Tells of Standard Oil Contributions.

POMERENE ASKS QUESTIONS

Ohio Senator Draws Out the Statement From the Witness That the Late Cornelius N. Bliss Told Standard Oil Officials Colonel Roosevelt and George B. Cortelyou Knew of Big Gift and Were Eager for More.

Washington, Aug. 24.—Senator Penrose was a witness before the Clapp committee. He introduced into the record the statement regarding the $25,000 contribution to the Pennsylvania campaign fund of 1904 by John D. Archbold and the contribution of $100,000 to the national campaign fund, which he made Wednesday in the senate. He said he had practically nothing to add to that, but would answer any questions.

Senator Pomerene took up the examination of Senator Penrose and inquired as to various interviews with Archbold and other men connected with the Standard Oil company.

"Mr. Archbold told me," said Mr. Penrose, "that his board of directors would decline to aid in the national campaign if there was any secrecy about the matter—if their activity was not known to President Roosevelt and Mr. Cortelyou."

"At these interviews was anything said about Mr. Roosevelt's views on the tariff?"

"It generally was understood that he stood for a protective tariff as outlined in the Republican platforms since 1896," answered Penrose.

"Was anything said about his attitude toward so called 'big business?'" asked Pomerene.

"There was a general assurance on the part of Mr. Bliss that the powers of the presidential office would not be used in a harsh way for demagogic effect."

Anxious for More Money.

Senator Penrose said that in an interview following the first Standard Oil contribution at which he was present Mr. Bliss told the Standard Oil officials that Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Cortelyou "had been advised of the first contribution and were extremely solicitous about their complying with his request for a second contribution."

Senator Penrose declared he told Mr. Archbold that he was making a mistake in not making these contributions and that Mr. Archbold agreed with him. The senator explained that he believed if Mr. Bliss, who was in close touch with Mr. Cortelyou and Mr. Roosevelt, said the national committee needed money, that it really was in need.

Senator Penrose said he never had discussed Standard Oil contributions with Mr. Cortelyou, but he believed the subject of contributions had come up casually in conversations he had had with President Roosevelt, both before and after the election of 1904.

"While no direct reference was made to the contributions in 1904 I believed the president was cognizant of the habit of the Standard Oil company to contribute to every campaign since 1896," said Penrose.

He was positive Mr. Roosevelt never had suggested to him that the Standard Oil money be returned. He again referred to the letter which President Roosevelt wrote him, thanking him for his "extraordinary efforts." Senator Penrose obtained a promise that the letter would be inserted in the record.

Senator Penrose said he had been one of the original Roosevelt supporters and had called the state convention in Pennsylvania in 1904, which was the first convention to declare for President Roosevelt's renomination.

Penrose Supported Roosevelt.

"We endorsed Roosevelt," said Penrose, "and forced Senator Hanna, who was opposed to Roosevelt, to surrender to Senator Foraker and allow the Ohio convention to endorse Roosevelt. I may say I was probably as earnest a supporter of President Roosevelt all through his seven years' term as any, except perhaps Senators Platt, Quay and Foraker."

Senator Pomerene asked Senator Penrose about the report of the industrial commission, which, according to one of the Archbold letters, was sent to Archbold in advance.

"If the report was sent," said Senator Penrose, "and I have no way of telling whether it was, it probably was one of some hundreds sent to Pennsylvanians who had testified before the commission. I make it a practice to send data to citizens of the state who are interested. It was sent as I might send information to John Mitchell or any other labor leader if he asked for it."

Senator Penrose said he had little to do with the report of the commission and that he attended few of its meetings.

Senator Penrose declared he received no contributions other than the single one of $25,000 from the Standard Oil company in 1904 and that he received none in the 1908 campaign.

BELIEVE OROZCO CANNOT ESCAPE

Mexican Regulars Claim to Have Rebels in a Trap.

INSURGENT FORCE IS SMALL

Only About Six Hundred Men Remain With General Orozco and Ten Thousand Federals Are Spread Out in Such a Manner as to Make His Escape Appear Practically Impossible.

Juarez, Mex., Aug. 24.—Pascual Orozco, commander-in-chief of the rebel forces in the North, is caught as a mouse in a trap, although the trap is 100 miles wide and 200 miles long. This is declared by advices received here by General Joaquin Tellez, federal commander of this zone. The official announcement is verified by every report.

Orozco now has only about 600 men. He is surrounded by federal forces aggregating 10,000, that are spread out from the city of Chihuahua to the border at this point and along the Mexican Central, running directly north to the border, and the Mexican Northwestern, which runs from Chihuahua City west and north to Juarez.

Orozco left Villa Ahumada, a station midway between Chihuahua and Juarez, Thursday. Three times he attempted to move away from the railway, only to have his scouts encounter some federal force. On his final departure he burned his trains, sixty-five cars, destroyed three locomotives and rode away to the southwest. The rebels are suffering greatly for want of food for themselves and their horses.

Federal Cavalry In Pursuit.

Moving across this same territory is General Antonia Rabago with 2,000 federal cavalry and 1,500 additional troops were sent west from Chihuahua.

Four hundred troops were dispatched from Juarez over the railway for the southwest. This, it is believed here, will insure the capture of Orozco.

Coincident with the departure of Orozco the Mexican Northwestern railway was cut between Pearson and Cumbro. Two hundred rebels thus attempted to make a way for their commander to escape into the state of Sonora, where the majority of the rebel army is moving toward the west coast, with the evident intention of taking a seaport.

But the communication was cut only temporarily. Seventy-five federal cavalrymen were sent out from Pearson and met the rebels near Cumbro. The insurrectos were routed, losing three killed and twenty-six captured, besides suffering the loss of their ammunition and provision train. The road has been repaired and traffic is resumed.

BANKS CAN HANDLE FUNDS

Not Illegal to Aid Campaign Collectors, Rules Solicitor.

Washington, Aug. 24.—The proposed plan of Acting Chairman McAdoo of the Democratic national committee to have banks receive and transmit campaign contributions for the Democratic, Republican and Progressive campaigns is not illegal so far as the national banks are concerned, provided the banks incur no extra expense and undertake the work voluntarily.

This opinion was given to Secretary MacVeagh by F. A. Reeve, acting solicitor of the treasury department, who examined the national bank and campaign publicity laws with reference to the proposition, the legality of which was called into question a few days ago by Representative Hill of Connecticut.

LA FOLLETTE PRAISES TAFT

Attacks Efforts to Limit Term of Government Clerks.

Madison, Wis., Aug. 24.—Senator La Follette has a good word for President Taft. In his magazine he commends the president's defense of the civil service. He says:

"The proposition to limit the tenure of office of government clerks to seven years can not be defended on any basis and was a very reasonable ground for the president's veto of the legislative appropriation bill."

LAST TRIBUTE OF RESPECT

Thousands of People View Remains of General Booth.

London, Aug. 24.—The last tribute of respect was paid to the late General William Booth by many thousands of people when his body lay in state at Congress hall, Clapton.

Among those who showed their appreciation of the evangelist's work was the German emperor, who sent a wreath of white lilies forming the imperial initial to be placed on the bier. It was accompanied by his majesty's card surmounted by a crown. The German embassy also sent a wreath.

JAMES R. GARFIELD.

Says Archbold's Testimony Is Not Confined to Facts.

GARFIELD SCORES ARCHBOLD

Calls His Statement Deliberate and Unqualified Falsehood.

Cleveland, Aug. 24.—All plans for the prosecution of the Standard Oil company had been outlined by James R. Garfield, as head of the bureau of corporations, before the fall of 1904, when John D. Archbold stated before the senate committee at Washington the company made a contribution of $100,000 to the Republican campaign fund.

This statement was made by Mr. Garfield, who, referring to his diary, found a letter of Nov. 4, 1904, in which Mr. Roosevelt denied that such gifts had been sought.

"A deliberate and unqualified falsehood," was the way Garfield characterized the evidence given by Mr. Archbold in so far as it dealt with the prosecution.

ROOSEVELT MAY BE CALLED TO TESTIFY

Will Probably Appear Before Senate Committee.

Washington, Aug. 24.—It is believed here that Colonel Roosevelt will take the stand within a few days before the senate subcommittee investigating campaign expenditures to answer the charges made by John D. Archbold that Mr. Roosevelt had knowledge of the use of Standard Oil money in his campaign of 1904.

The committee was divided over its future course of action. Upon the arrival of Senator Luke Lea, one of the absent Democratic members of the committee, a meeting will be held to determine when to call and where the next meeting is to be held. Several members of the subcommittee favor transferring the hearings at once to New York, where Colonel Roosevelt, George W. Perkins, George B. Cortelyou and members of the Standard Oil company's board of directors might testify.

The statement made by John D. Archbold, financial head of the Standard Oil company, made a clear cut issue between him and Colonel Roosevelt, according to members of the subcommittee who would discuss the matter. Mr. Archbold testified that his understanding that Colonel Roosevelt knew about and endorsed the Standard Oil contributions came through former Treasurer Cornelius N. Bliss of the Republican national committee, who is dead.

Although Colonel Roosevelt publicly stated that it was absurd for him to appear before the senate committee, it is understood that he has consented to take the stand, if desired, in view of the direct charges made by Mr. Archbold.

GAVE REPUBLICANS MONEY

John D. Archbold Admits Contributing $125,000 in 1904.

Washington, Aug. 24.—John D. Archbold told the senate committee investigating campaign funds that the Standard Oil company's $125,000 contribution to the Republican war chest of 1904 was made upon assurances from Cornelius N. Bliss that "the contribution was acceptable to Colonel Theodore Roosevelt and that further contributions would be acceptable."

"I told Mr. Bliss we did not want to make the contribution unless it was to be gratefully received," he said. "Mr. Bliss told us of Mr. Roosevelt's attitude toward business and said he believed Mr. Roosevelt to be a fair and conservative man when it came to the test."

Lodge Clerk Held to Grand Jury.

Minneapolis, Aug. 24.—Charged with embezzling $1,234.25 of the funds of Prospect camp, Modern Woodmen of America, Frank E. Larson, clerk of the camp, waived examination before Municipal Judge C. L. Smith and was held to the grand jury under $2,500 bail.

WILL WELCOME ADJOURNMENT

Members Will Be Pleased When Session Ends.

SO WILL ENTIRE COUNTRY.

Recalls Former Session That Lasted Till October—When It Was Over Press Gallery Sang Doxology—Senator Bankhead Is Humorous—Akin Would Stop Congressional Record.

By ARTHUR W. DUNN.

Washington, Aug. 24.—[Special.]—Years ago, before the flood—Johnstown flood—there was a session of congress which lasted until the 1st of October. Then as now there had been a great sham battle over the tariff between a Democratic house and a Republican senate. Then, however, the Republican senate had no insurgents, and so the tariff bills were not sent to the then Democratic president. The president did not figure in the great fight, which reminds me of the recent contest between the "reds" and "blues" in the vicinity of New York, another great sham battle with generals, colonels, majors, staff officers and regulars and militia figuring in the "war game."

What I started to say was that when the celebrated session came to an end the newspaper men in the press gallery of the house broke forth in that well known hymn, "Praise God, From Whom All Blessings Flow." It struck a responsive chord among the members on the floor, and they stopped in their mad career for the doors long enough to join in the hymn. The same feeling applies in regard to the second session of the Sixty-second congress.

Was Champ "Vetoed?"

Discussing one of many vetoes, Congressman Burke of Pennsylvania remarked: "Now, as bearing upon the question as to whether there is an evil in the inherent veto power over the will of the majority, 150 men in the Baltimore convention recently exercised the veto power after a majority of the Democrats of the United States had nominated Champ Clark for president of the United States."

And Champ said never a word.

Expressions of Leaders.

During a debate in the house on a veto message Minority Leader Mann gave forth this opinion: "At this time, considering the condition of the country concerning politics, it ought to be easy to adopt unanimously, without a dissenting voice, an amendment to the constitution fixing the presidential term at six years and making any person holding the office forever after ineligible for another term."

And Chairman Fitzgerald, second in command on the Democratic side, jocosely remarked: "After the action of the Republicans in helping to pass the tariff bills over the president's veto, it might be possible, if they would study the Democratic platform a little more closely, they would help us put through our entire program."

Bankhead's Joke.

Champ Clark once expressed his surprise because Senator Penrose had a sense of humor, saying that he would have expected as much from a graven image. And so it was in regard to Senator Bankhead of Alabama. He was speaking on a bill he wanted passed for a power plant in Alabama. Speaking of power, he mentioned wind and added, "I have sometimes thought that if we would turn a little of this wind that I have observed in this chamber into that industry we would have an inexhaustible supply for motive power."

The senate was so surprised at this little jokelet coming from Bankhead that it actually laughed.

Can Change His Mind.

Senator Reed of Missouri pulled an old bill on John Sharp Williams one day in the senate which had been introduced in the house and then accused him of changing his mind. It didn't feaze John Sharp in the least. "So far from its being difficult for me to change my opinion," said the Mississippi senator, "I find that it is rather difficult to keep from changing it too often as I grow older and learn more."

"No Account Paper Anyhow."

They refused to publish Congressman Akin's contribution to the Congressional Record, and he turned around, like many another, and said it was a "no account paper anyhow."

"And let me say further of the Congressional Record," said the New York man, "the sooner it dies the better. It is a needless expense. It has a limited circulation and is very seldom read unless some man is harpooned. It is the cemetery of blasted hopes and shrouded ambitions, of half baked thoughts and hot air bunk. This Congressional Record is a misrepresentation. It is a fake. The speeches made on the floor are revised and revamped and fixed up by each member to suit himself. Why fool the public any longer?"

State Rivalry.

Congressman Kinkead of New Jersey in a controversy with J. Hampton Moore of Pennsylvania mentioned that Moore was born in New Jersey. "Is that an apology or a charge?" asked Burke of Pennsylvania, knowing the rivalry of the two states bordering on the Delaware.

Three Killed in Auto Accidents.

Chicago, Aug. 24.—Three persons were killed and five injured by automobiles.

GEORGE B. CORTELYOU.

Alleged to Have Known of Standard Oil Gift.

STRIKES BACK AT PENROSE

Philadelphia Editor Gives Out an Open Letter.

Philadelphia, Aug. 24.—E. A. Van Valkenberg, editor of the North American, issued an open letter to Senator Penrose, in which he gives his version of the prosecution for bribery brought aginst him sixteen years ago, which was referred to by the senator in his address to the senate on Wednesday last.

In the letter Mr. Van Valkenberg declares that the prosecution was the result of a conspiracy and tells of efforts to get the case on trial.

"Confronted with the exposure a trial would have inevitably caused of the crime and corruption of your friends," the letter continues, "your state machine ordered the abandonment of the prosecution and it was abandoned of record. That was without any request or consent, or even knowledge, until it was consummated.

"The stain of corruption money is on your hands; the mark of corporate bribery is on your forehead and your attempt to divert the finger of scorn and accusation from you by a slander of me will be unsuccessful."

PLANNING TO LAY BARE POLICE GRAFT

Seven New York Inspectors Summoned to Testify.

New York, Aug. 24.—The first step toward laying a foundation for the John Doe proceedings by which it is planned to bare police graft in this city was taken when seven police inspectors were summoned to the office of Assistant District Attorney De Ford. They were under summons authorized by Justice Goff, who is to preside at the inquiry, to bring with them all data pertaining to gambling and other illegal resorts in their respective districts.

This data includes the addresses of raided resorts, the names of their reputed owners and a record of all arrests and convictions in the several districts during the last three years, including the recent period during which Police Lieutenant Charles Becker, the accused instigator of the murder of Herman Rosenthal, is charged by his self-confessed accomplices with having profited from blackmail.

This material will be used by Mr. De Ford, who has been given charge of the inquiry, as a groundwork for the investigation, for the summoning of witnesses and the cross-examination of the inspectors themselves, all of whom it is expected will be summoned before Justice Goff.

AGREE TO SUPPORT WILSON

Two La Follette Republicans Will Form Organization.

Chicago, Aug. 24.—Joseph E. Davies of Wisconsin, secretary of the Democratic national committee, announced that Rudolph Spreckels of California and John J. Blaine of Wisconsin, supporters of United States Senator Robert M. La Follette in his campaign for the Republican presidential nomination, have agreed to head an organization to work for Woodrow Wilson in the presidential campaign.

According to tentative plans of the Democratic managers the organization will be known as the Wilson National Progressive Republican league and will make an active fight in support of Wilson among Republicans.

Another Alderman Held.

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 24.—Alderman Louis Brozo was bound over to stand trial in recorder's court on the charge of having accepted a bribe of $100 in return for alleged municipal favors to be granted the Wabash railroad. His bond was reduced from $5,000 to $1,000, as in the case of Alderman Glinnan, bound over on the same charge several days ago. Brozo furnished bail.

J. N. Hill Weds in London.

London, Aug. 24.—The marriage took place of James Norman Hill, eldest son of James J. Hill, the railroad magnate of St. Paul, and Mrs. Marguerite Sawyer Fahnestock, daughter of Arthur W. Sawyer of Boston. A civil ceremony took place at the registry office and later the pair were married in the Chapel Royal of the Savoy.

CUT IN REVENUE DISTRICTS

Reduction in Appropriation Makes Decrease Necessary.

Washington, Aug. 24.—One reduction in the amount carried by the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill which President Taft signed made necessary the abolishment of four internal revenue districts. This was accomplished by an order which the president executed, consolidating the four districts with other districts, as follows:

District of South Carolina, consolidated with the Fourth North Carolina district; district of Oklahoma, consolidated with the district of Kansas; First district of New Jersey, consolidated with Fifth district in that state, and First and Second districts in Wisconsin, consolidated into the district of Wisconsin.

CLOSES CHICAGO RESORTS

Mayor Harrison Orders Five Disorderly Houses to Quit.

Chicago, Aug. 24.—Terror struck the South Side tenderloin when Mayor Harrison ordered five disorderly houses closed. The order was issued after Carl A. Waldron, a member of the committee of fifteen, had appealed to the mayor and said he had made a futile effort to induce the police to close the houses. Four of the places were conducted by persons who are fugitives from justice and the fifth by a man who was held to the grand jury on a charge of harboring a sixteen-year-old girl.

Call Off Sympathy Strike.

Chicago, Aug. 24.—Members of the Truck Drivers, Chauffeurs and Helpers' union, who haul print paper to the Chicago newspaper offices, formally called off a strike that was started in sympathy with the pressmen who walked out several weeks ago.

Train Kills Three Boys.

Terre Haute, Ind., Aug. 24.—Three boys were killed and four were probably mortally injured near here when a Southern Indiana passenger train ran into them. They had just dodged a freight train.

The Sacred Oath.

"Do you know what an oath is?" asked a Virginia judge of an old darky who wanted his vote sworn in at an election.

"Yes, sah. When a man sweahs to a lie he's got ter stick to it."—Satire.

COLONEL DOUBTS ARCHBOLD STORY

Former President Intimates Oil Magnate Is Untruthful.

SAYS INTERESTS FEAR HIM

In a Statement Replying to John D. Archbold's Testimony Roosevelt Again Asserts He Knew Nothing of a Standard Oil Gift to the Republican Campaign Fund in 1904.

Oyster Bay, Aug. 24.—In a statement given out in reply to the testimony of John D. Archbold before the senate investigating committee Colonel Roosevelt reiterated his declaration that he knew nothing of a contribution by Mr. Archbold or the Standard Oil company to the Republican campaign of 1904 and charged that the course of Mr. Penrose in this matter and the bringing in of Mr. Archbold to testify "bear close analogies to what in the New York police situation at this time would be called a 'frameup.'"

This is shown, said the colonel, by the questions which Mr. Archbold is asked and by those he is not asked.

In his last word Colonel Roosevelt thanked both Messrs. Archbold and Penrose for "making it clear beyond possibility of doubt that I am the man the Penroses and Archbolds of the country most dread in public life."

"In the first place," Colonel Roosevelt's statement says, "I wish to call attention to the fact that even if Mr. Archbold's statements are true they amount only to saying, so far as I am concerned, that Mr. Bliss told him that I had knowledge of and approved a request for $100,000 from the Standard Oil company, which was granted, and a further request for $150,000, which was not granted. This is a pure hearsay statement and even if made in good faith would be utterly valueless.

Demanded Return of Money.

"Not only did I never know anything of such a request being made, but my published letters and telegrams show that when the rumor that there had been a contribution reached me I acted at once, reiterating my demand again and again that the money should be immediately returned, if it had been given, and being assured by Mr. Cortelyou that the money had not been received and would not be received.

"Therefore, even on the assumption that Mr. Archbold is telling the truth, his testimony, so far as I am concerned, consists of the repetition of hearsay assertions, which were instantly disproved by the production of my letters and telegrams.

"I wish to reiterate that until Mr. Penrose made his speech I never had heard it suggested that Mr. Archbold had contributed to the campaign or been the means through which any contribution had been made.

"But I do not for one moment believe that Mr. Archbold's testimony is truthful. He apparently possesses such a moral stand that he does not understand the infamous accusation he is making against Mr. Bliss. Mr. Bliss is now dead. But during the seven years that elapsed before Mr. Bliss' death after Mr. Archbold claims he made the contribution in question Mr. Archbold never brought up any statement of this kind.

Says Bliss Warned Him.

"He now says that Mr. Bliss warned him that he was making a serious mistake in not contributing the extra amount of money and that later on when the administration began to deal with the Standard Oil people Mr. Bliss said it would have been different if they had done as he asked them.

"This is an assertion that Mr. Bliss was deliberately trying to blackmail the Standard Oil into contributing, by scarcely veiled threats as to what would happen if they did not contribute, and that Mr. Bliss in effect told them afterward that if they had contributed the administration would not have proceeded against them for violating the law—for this was all the administration did.

"This is a wicked assault on a dead man whose high standing and probity was such that no human being who was himself honest would ever impute evil motives to him. Mr. Bliss was incapable of conduct such as Mr. Archbold imputes to him. And I cannot too strongly denounce the baseness of making such an attack upon an honorable man who is now dead and whom Mr. Archbold never ventured to assail while living.

"Moreover, Mr. Archbold shows perfectly clearly, as published reports say, that his corporation had contributed in order to get value for its gift and that the gift was made with the expectation of receiving a proper consideration."

Baldwin Chief of New Bureau.

Washington, Aug. 24.—President Taft sent to the senate the nomination of Albert U. S. Baldwin of Connecticut to be chief of the new bureau of domestic and foreign commerce, which is a consolidation by congress of the bureau of manufactures and the bureau of statistics in the department of commerce and labor. Mr. Baldwin formerly was chief of the bureau of manufactures.

The interest taken in America is intense and she answered many questions about America and described Brainerd as well as the growth of the iron mining industry in this county to scores of people. Several years ago Mr. and Mrs. Larson sold some of their land to the iron companies, realizing a good price for the same.

"Your postoffice building," said Mr. Peck, "is a beautiful structure and equal to the best government building in any town of equal size. The lawn is kept in fine shape and speaks well for the employe at the postoffice who keeps it in trim. The lawn at the Y. M. C. A. building contributes to increase the beauties of the association building. I hear much mention about Brainerd in my travels. Our Y. M. C. A. association in this city is alive and progressive and the people appreciate its benefits."

FIRST NATIONAL ON ROLL OF HONOR

Roll of Honor of National Banks of Country is Table Prepared by "New York Financier"

IS AN ENVIABLE DISTINCTION

First National Shows a Surplus and Undivided Profits in Excess of its Capital Stock

The First National bank of Brainerd has a prominent place on the twenty-second annual roll of honor compiled by the New York Financier, a leading financial paper of the country.

The "Roll of Honor" of the national banks of the United States is a table prepared from the statements made to the Comptroller of the Currency, the date chosen being September, the statements made then being published in a large volume by the government.

To secure a place on the "Roll of Honor" a bank must show surplus and undivided profits equal to or in excess of its capital stock—that is, assuming the capital to be one hundred per cent, the profits and surplus must exceed that percentage. In other words, a "Roll of Honor" bank has on hand, in the form of surplus and profits, an amount larger than its capital. A bank's numerical order on the roll is based on the percentage of surplus and profits to capital.

There are 1,366 banks in the United States having a greater surplus than capital. Among other banks in the state that are included in the list are the First National of Duluth, two national banks of Minneapolis, three national banks of St. Paul, and national banks at Austin, Hastings, Mankato, Moorhead, St. Peter, Stillwater, Wabasha, Windom and Winona.

The bank holding first place in the country is the First National of Uniontown, Pa., with a capital of $100,000 and surplus and undivided profits of $1,466,451.

The First National bank of Brainerd was established in 1881 and in importance and financial strength ranks among the largest institutions of its kind in Minnesota and the west. Its capital stock is $50,000, surplus $50,000 and undivided profits $12,765.69. Its deposits, according to its last statement, were $1,128,894.51.

George D. LaBar is the president of the bank; Judge G. W. Holland, vice president; F. A. Farrar, cashier; George H. Brown, first assistant cashier; Bernard L. Lagerquist, second assistant cashier.

Nordstrom-Eggen

A quiet home wedding was solemnized this noon at 12 o'clock, at 919 Main street, when Miss Jennie A. Eggen of this city, and John Nordstrom of Duluth, were united in marriage.

The bride was attired in a dress of white messaline and carried white astors, and was assisted at the altar by her sister, Miss Inga, who was dressed in white voile, carrying flowers similar to those of the bride. Mr. Nordstrom was assisted by Mr. Carl Eggen.

Only a few of the relatives and friends of the young couple witnessed the pleasing ceremony, the marriage lines of the ring service being read by the Rev. Charles Fox Davis.

After the wedding the party drove to the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. Eggen, Long Lake, returning to the city and will leave for Duluth, their future home, on the early train tomorrow.

Mr. Nordstrom was formerly of this city, and is now in the employ of the Northern Pacific in Duluth. The bride is well known to a large circle of friends in the city, having lived here for a number of years.

The Dispatch joins their many friends in wishing for them a very happy future.

AUTOMOBILE NOTES

News of Tourists Visiting City—Local Items—Trade Notes From the Garages

Arnold Nicholson, a nephew of Dr. and Mrs. Joseph Nicholson, Miss Mildred and Miss Astrid Nicholson, nieces, and Mrs. O. Nestor, a friend, all of Minneapolis, motored to Brainerd in their Kissel Kar, leaving the Flour City at 6:30 in the morning and arriving at two o'clock in the afternoon. The automobile is a powerful six cylinder, 60 horsepower car. They will visit some time with Dr. and Mrs. Nicholson.

Neil O'Brien, it is said, contemplates taking the agency of an automobile. As a skillful demonstrator of cars Mr. O'Brien has no equal. He showed a party of friends what his Flanders could do by giving them a midnight ride through the rain and over the undulating Bay Lake road from Deerwood to Brainerd, every bump being taken at full speed.

Friends have been giving M. T. Dunn, of the Citizens State bank, numerous auto rides and if this keeps on there can be but one result—M. T. will buy a car.

The Dispatch has been in receipt of pointed communications of farmers objecting to being crowded off narrow roads and bridges by certain autos. The communications in many cases have been so pointed that they could not be published. It is sufficient, however, to say that there is a growing feeling among the farmers that the man with a team and wagon or horses and buggy is entitled to as much road as the automobile and that the ancient, common law rules of the road apply to both alike and should be observed by both.

There is a law which orders cars and motorcycles to run as silently as possible. It is a common practice in this city for certain cars and motorcycles to go down a street snorting a blast of pops and cracks like a sham battle at the state fair. Teams may stand on their hind legs ready to bolt and run away, farmers may struggle at the lines, but these gasoline outfits continue to hurl out their staccato barks. There is a state law which clearly prohibits this unnecessary noise.

In a recent auto trip of 300 miles made by C. A. Olson, the only trouble encountered was several flat tires. People of Brainerd and vicinity snow more courtesy to their fellow travelers than do the car owners near Richmond and St. Joe, not one of whom stopped to offer any assistance to Mr. Olson.

Oscar Carlson and Victor Wickstrom suffered breakdowns to their cars when each was miles away from his home in Deerwood. The walking was good however.

Many auto parties are being formed to drive to Crosby Tuesday afternoon August 27, to attend the concert to be given at the Bijou theatre by the society people of Crosby and Deerwood. The concert has been arranged as a benefit performance for the Episcopal church of Crosby and will take place at eight o'clock in the evening.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

"The Prince of Tonight"

Indications point to a record breaking house for the engagement of the gorgeous musical spectacle, "The Prince of Tonight," at the opera house Tuesday evening, Sept. 3. Seat sale opens at Dunn's drug store at 10 A. M. Saturday, August 31.

This popular musical fantasy has been meeting with such marked success that the desire to see it is the same everywhere, and this city is no exception to the rule. The production is a LeComte and Flesher offering, and one may expect much in the way of good music and clever people, especially when the splendid baritone Tom Arnold heads the cast. Chicago, placed the stamp of approval on "The Prince of Tonight," by extending it a prosperous run of 260 nights and from the day it began its road tour the business has been capacity.

CHARMING PARTY ON THE WATER

Deerwood and Crosby Society People Enjoy a Dance on The Ingalls Barge Tuesday Evening

MORE SIDEWALKS IN DEERWOOD

State Tax Commission at Deerwood—R. R. Graham's New Electric Hair Dryer

Deerwood, Minn., Aug. 23—A social function enjoyed by the society people of Crosby and Deerwood was the evening party given on the barge of the Ingalls Mtor Boat company on Tuesday evening. Powerful launches towed the barge about Serpent lake while the guests enjoyed dancing and were later served with dainty refreshments. Among those present were Judge and Mrs. J. T. Hale, Mr. and Mrs. Cuyler Adams, Mr. and Mrs. Culver Adams, Mr. and Mrs. B. J. Magoffin, Robert Adams, Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Edson, Paul M. Hale, Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Ernster, Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Buxton, of Deerwood, and Mr. and Mrs. Chester D. Tripp, Dr. and Mrs. R. J. Sewall, Mrs. R. B. Dear, C. J. O'Connell of Crosby and others.

Deerwood will furnish some of the talent at the benefit performance to be given at the Bijou theater at Crosby on Tuesday evening, August 27. Ladies and gentlemen of Deerwood and Crosby are deeply interested in making this concert for the benefit of the Crosby Episcopal church an unqualified success.

Mrs. P. A. Gough is instructing the double quartette of Deerwood ladies and gentlemen who will sing at the concert. They are Mrs. Gormeley, Mrs. Tom Watson, Mrs. F. A. # A Gift of Flowers

That Were Thrown Out of a Window

By F. A. MITCHEL

Being invited to spend the week end with my friend Mary Morrison at her cottage by the sea, I was about starting from the house when I received a telegram, as follows:

Tiny will meet you at the station. Bring her along.

I had heard Mary speak of Tiny Archibald, who rejoiced in the more euphonious name of Gwendolin, but whose baby nickname had stuck to her through childhood and youth. I had never seen her, but had been told that she was a very attractive girl. But how was I to recognize her? Mary had not told me that she would carry her handkerchief in her left hand or that she would wear a sprig of geranium in her belt. Doubtless she had spoken of Miss Archibald to me so often that she supposed I had met her cousin.

I went to the station expecting to find a young lady on the lookout for some one she didn't know and in order to prepare for a little attention bought some violets, which I carried in my hand. I had no sooner entered the waiting room than I noticed an attractive looking woman walking back and forth, staring at every man she passed. I was sure she was the person I was to meet, so I walked up to her, lifted my hat politely and was about to ask her if she was not Miss Archibald when she gave me a meaning look and said in a quick low voice:

"Not a word till we are on the train."

I confess I was surprised. What could be the necessity for such mystery since I was simply to escort her on a short journey? However, it was she who was making the mystery, not I, and it behooved me to do as she said and find out the cause when she chose to tell me. I relieved her of a satchel she carried and conducted her to a parlor car. When we were seated I politely handed her the violets. The day was hot, and a window was open. What did she do but throw the flowers out on to a side track.

Never in my life have I been more astonished at the reception of a gift. The expression on my face betrayed how deeply I felt the insult, and the lady hastened to explain. But the explanation only added to my amazement.

"We are observed," she said; "the violets will give us away."

"Give us away?"

"Yes; Mary knows that you were to carry violets, and she may have let it out."

"Mary knows! She mentioned nothing by which"—

"Hush! The man opposite is listening."

Of all the receptions I ever had from woman this certainly was the most remarkable. Surely there was something missing that would have made all this clear. I have it. Mary has written me a letter that I have not received. In that letter she developed something in which I am expected to take part. The telegram was supplementary.

"I suppose you know where you are to take me?" said my companion in a low voice.

"I do," I replied, retiring within myself and determined to let the story proceed without giving away the fact that the only instructions I had received were to take her to Mary Morrison's seaside residence.

"Will Arthur meet us at the station or somewhere else?"

This was a point blank question that I proposed to parry. "I have not been instructed as to that. Doubtless we shall be advised when we arrive."

"Surely."

"Pleasant," I remarked to myself, "this ease with which I satisfy the lady. I wonder if I'll get on as well with the rest of the questions she asks me."

"I don't dare continue this any longer," she said suddenly after looking through the car suspiciously. "I will take another seat."

She did as she said she would do. I didn't mind her mysterious actions up to this point, but now to be deprived of the company on which I had counted was positively annoying. I thought I would give up my part in the play, follow her and ask her what the dickens it all meant. I was rising to do so when she saw me and with knit brows and a commanding look ordered me to remain where I was.

The train stopped at a station at which a number of persons got on. I happened to look at Miss Archibald and noticed that she had pulled a thick veil down over her face. I didn't think very much of this, for the car was full of dust. Not having any one to talk to, I lay back and closed my eyes. A boy selling candies went through the train crying his wares. He ceased to shout at the end of the car where Miss Archibald was sitting, and not long afterward I felt a tap on my shoulder. Looking up, there was the candy boy holding out a pasteboard box to me.

"Don't want any," I said testily.

"Lady at other end of the car sent 'em to you, sir."

I took the box, removed the lid, and there on top of some bonbons lay a folded bit of white paper. Opening it, I read:

"The gentleman in the white vest and glasses knows me. Should he get out at our station don't leave the car on any account. Go on to the next."

"This beats me," I remarked to myself, reading the note over a second time to make sure I had read it aright.

I surveyed the gentleman referred to and detected him looking over the top of his newspaper at Miss Archibald, as if trying to make out whether or not he knew her.

"Well," I said to myself, "I'm not having the companionship of a young lady, but I'm having a lot to think about. I wonder what he has to do with it all."

But Miss Archibald kept the veil over her face, and there was no show for the man to claim an acquaintance, which I inferred the play that was going on wouldn't admit. I had a notion to go and sit by him and engage him in conversation, with a view to pumping him, but on second thought desisted.

Presently, the train slowing up at a station, I saw Tiny glance through the window, give her hand a quick little shake at some one outside, then look meaningly at me and gather her belongings as if to leave the train. I followed suit. She came past where I was sitting and whispered: "It's all right. They are on the platform. Come."

Whether to come or escape from I knew not what by remaining on the train I was uncertain. Curiosity prevailed, and I passed out just behind Tiny. On the platform were a young man and a girl. Tiny and the man greeted each other with a loving though somewhat excited look.

"Where's Fred?" he asked.

"Here." She turned toward me.

"That's not Fred."

"Not Fred!"

"No."

There was a tableau not describable in words.

"Why, he carried the violets," stammered Tiny.

It was time for me to say something, and I did.

"There has been a mistake here. I expected to meet a young lady at the station whom I had never seen, and I carried some violets that I proposed to bestow upon her. This young lady, through a mistake, of course, accosted me, and we got on the train together, when she threw my violets out of the window"—

"Oh, heavens!" exclaimed Tiny.

The young lady and the young man smiled.

"Never mind," said the young man. "All's well that ends well. Permit me to explain, sir. You have unintentionally got mixed in an elopement. A friend of mine was to have met my fiancee at the station and escort her to me here. She has missed him, and since you have performed his part thus far I would be pleased to have you finish it by serving as my best man. This is Miss Darton, who is to be bridesmaid."

I bowed politely to Miss Darton, who, vainly endeavoring to repress her merriment at the absurd outcome of the affair, returned my salute.

"Come on," said the groom. "We have no time to lose. I have a carriage waiting."

He hurried us off to the carriage, he and his fiancee engaged in too serious a business to be affected by the ludicrous feature of the affair. But Miss Darton was convulsed, and I boiled over with suppressed emotion of a similar kind.

"I wonder who got my girl," I remarked.

Miss Darton exploded at this, and it drew something like a smile to the lips of the groom. The bride refused to see anything to laugh at.

"Perhaps Fred got her," remarked Arthur.

"I trust she didn't throw his violets out of the window," I remarked.

At this the bride to be gave a nervous little laugh and said: "I trust you will pardon me. I was very much rattled."

"Naturally. One doesn't elope every day in the year," I replied.

By this time we had driven to the door of a pretty little church, where we all alighted and entered. We passed down the center aisle to the chancel, where the couple were married. The bride and groom went out together, I following with the bridesmaid. Then we re-entered the carriage and were driven back to the station. A train soon took away the bride and groom, leaving Miss Darton on the platform with me; she intending to go in the same direction as I.

"Who is Mary?" I asked.

"I am Mary. I arranged this elopement." Her merriment returned at the mere mention of the affair.

We boarded the next train, and I parted with her at my station, but not before I had received permission to continue the acquaintance begun in such an unusual manner.

When I reached my proper destination I drove up to Mary Morrison's cottage. She looked at me anxiously and asked:

"Where's Tiny?"

"Married." I replied laconically.

"Come, don't talk that way. Tell me why you haven't brought her."

I told the story and when I had finished was informed that Tiny was a poodle. She had been left in the city, and a maid was to have met me with her at the station.

I met Miss Darton later on—of course I didn't leave her without taking her address—and we enjoyed very much talking over the episode that had occasioned our acquaintance. More marriages occur between groomsmen and bridesmaids than those officiating at any other function. Miss Darton and I happened to make one of these cases. But we didn't elope, and there was no poodle to mix up anyone else on our wedding.
